

Editorial

Dear Colleagues,

Our newly-launched Journal, Global Journal of Oncologists (GJO), has successfully entered its Volume II phase. As you see from the previous issues, GJO provides an open-accessed, fast-communicated platform for colleagues in the field of oncology around the world, to exchange their innovative ideas on efficient prevention, accurate diagnosis, and effective treatment of tumors. The primary goal of GJO is to establish a new exciting and interactive opportunity for basic scientists, clinicians, and industries of the oncological family, to present their research, case-studies, novel approaches, and techniques or technologies. This workforce should enable to bring their common interests together to promote advances against the life-threatening oncological diseases.

We highly appreciate the hard and detailed works by the editorial team of GJO, led by Professor Naeem Ul Hassan with his staffs, of Savvy Science Publisher. We are also very pleased to see the great contributions by the authors and reviewers from five continents of the world, with our many thanks for their outstanding efforts on moving GJO forward. We sincerely wish the continuous success of GJO!

Professor Xiaoming Yang, MD, PhD
Editor-in-Chief

Global Journal of Oncologists